Dr. Anat Helman
Course/Module description:
Sociologists and anthropologists have been studying food for over a century, and lately historians have joined them too. The course investigates different Jewish communities during the 20th century, focusing on the various social and political roles of food in these groups.

Course/Module aims:
Tracing the roles that food played in Jewish cultural systems during the 20th century. After supplying some theoretical and comparative tools, it explores case studies from Europe, Muslim countries, USA and Israel, attempting to identify the manners in which food structures religious, ethnic, social, gender and national Jewish identities.

Learning outcomes - On successful completion of this module, students should be able to:
Summarize influential theories in the field; criticize historical studies on the topic; explain the main features of Jewish food cultures and independently interpret specific patterns; compare, in their final papers, the Jewish case with other case studies.

Attendance requirements(%):

Teaching arrangement and method of instruction: The seminar is conducted as a round-table discussion, in which all students present their conclusions of the weekly reading. At the end of the year a short final paper of a comparative nature will be submitted.
