Course/Module description:
This seminar examines the rise of 'the pathological' as a modern object of cultural knowledge, and the social mechanisms and political and economic contexts which shape 'modern pathologies' such as eating disorders, addictions, infertility, 'sexual deviance', depression, anxiety, 'yuppie disease', and others. Discussions will refer to the following questions: what is pathology? Is the border between 'the normal' and 'the pathological' always distinct? How do modern pathological conditions evolve and do they come to be social, physical, and mental realities?

Course/Module aims:
(A) To introduce students with sociological, anthropological, and historical literature on various aspects of physical, mental, and social 'pathologies', with a particular focus on the social construction of 'pathological states' inb late-modernity.
(B) To introduce students with the major analytical tools (theoretical perspectives, concepts, and methodological strategies) for a cultural study of 'pathological states'.

Learning outcomes - On successful completion of this module, students should be able to:
- to develop an individual research project, based on empirical and theoretical knowledge on pathologies and culture in modern societies.
