Course/Module description:
A semester-long seminar which investigates the literary texts, cultural production, visual culture and social institutions associated with the Truth and Reconciliation in post-apartheid South Africa.

Course/Module aims:
Testimony has emerged as an important genre in the wake of the historical catastrophes of the twentieth century, notably the Great War and the Holocaust. Whereas it is widely recognized that poststructuralist thought was constituted in response to the Holocaust, less attention has been paid to the manner in which the so-called ethical turn in Cultural Studies and in Postcolonial Theory is indebted to the category of witness. This course positions South Africa's Truth and Reconciliation Commission (TRC) as a paradigmatic instance of postcolonial witness, and seeks to investigate the ethical priorities of Postcolonialism and Cultural Studies in what Mark Sanders has termed “The Time of a Truth Commission”.

Learning outcomes - On successful completion of this module, students should be able to:
1. Identify major topoi of perpetrator and confessional literature in selected South African texts.
2. Define characteristics of literary fiction as testimony.
3. Evaluate and interpret the role of gender in the TRC and the cultural artifacts its generated.
4. To distinguish literary from visual cultural response to the TRC.
5. To comment on the role of testimony in establishing the ethical agendas of Cultural Studies.
