Course/Module Content:

Basic understanding of different musical styles, genres, ensembles and musical instruments from the traditions of various countries and regions in Latin America. Review of the music genres that were created over time in Latin America as a result of an encounter between different cultures (indigenous, African, Western European), such as rural-indigenous music, traditional folk, popular, scholarly, and discussing the interaction between these genres.

An understanding of the ethno-historic, aesthetic and religious contexts and the practical expression of these factors in the music itself (in melody, harmony, rhythm, forms, musical instruments, and styles of performance).

*A discussion of the process of formation of the different musical traditions and their dynamics of change in the past and the present.
