Course/Module description:

In recent years we have seen a change in the prevalent therapeutic models of the last century, which were influenced by the western medical model, distinguishing between physical, emotional and spiritual needs. Currently, we are in a period of expanding these models to allow the natural interface between mind, body and spirit. When this interface is seen as natural, it becomes natural as well to include in our therapeutic repertoire of interventions based on knowledge influenced by Eastern thought. In this course we will explore some of these approaches and interventions theoretically and experientially.

Course/Module aims:

To expand the therapeutic approaches and “tools” of the therapist and the healing modalities that become available to us as we acknowledge the holistic nature of man.

Learning outcomes - On successful completion of this module, students should be able to:

Integrate new perceptions and approaches into the therapeutic work of the student.

Attendance requirements(%):

100%

Teaching arrangement and method of instruction: Lecture, discussion, audio-visuals, experiential activities.

Course/Module Content:

Integration of East and West – enriching the therapeutic “tool box”

Energy system

States of deep relaxation and inner focus

Meditation, visualization and guided imagery

Breathwork therapy

Tapping for energetic change

Can we control what we attract into our lives?

Our shadow parts and clearing out projections
