Course/Module description:

The Qur'ân is the founding document of Islam, the Qur'ân is both the testimony of a cultic movement and the experience of a community. Focussing on the text of the Qur'ân is not only a hermeneutical challenge, because this text is both a textual preform and an oral proclamation in the sense of an interaction between speaker and listeners. Only the editorial decisions provide Quran translators with a »textus receptus«. This code remains effective today. That is why an actual Qur'ân translation from Arabic into other languages, such as into German, is not possible according to Islamic theologians, because every translation is also an interpretation.

Course/Module aims:

The course arises whether this perspective in terms of translations does not apply to every demanding text? The first thing that appears is the fact that the Qur'an is till today available in almost fifty German-language translations. The topic of this event is who made these translations with what intentions and what reception in the historical context of almost five hundred years

Learning outcomes - On successful completion of this module, students should be able to:

Introduction to the analysis of translation and interpretation, overview of production and reception of translations of the Qur'rân into German. Intention and stipulation for translations, modern methods of interpreting them.

Attendance requirements(%):

Open to all students (Language skills in German and Arabic desired)

Teaching arrangement and method of instruction: Communicative method, discussion of topics and texts, application of theory to practice and verification of several translations.

Course/Module Content:

Overview of the history of german translations of the Holy Qur'ân from 1543 to 2013.
