Course/Module description:
This introduction to poetry and aesthetics by Paul Celan (1920-1970) takes up, the debate about the question of a not possible poetry after the »shoah«. The considerations of Theodor W. Adorno (1903-1969) in the context of a possible culture after the »holocaust« and the confrontation of Paul Celan with Martin Heidegger (1889-1976), which he expresses in his poem about this philosopher, also reflect the precarious relationship to language that Celan coexists with tried to overcome a linguistic expression yet to be found.
