Course/Module description:

Biblical references in modernist literary works illustrate literature's potential to transform ancient forms and conceptions into driving forces of renewal. This renewal concerns both literature and the Bible. Their encounter in modernist texts rarely occurs in a straightforward fashion. While the modernist literary reception of Biblical material occasionally does appear as pious affirmation or outright rejection, more characteristically, it alters, displaces, or distorts the original Scriptures. Not only do these transformations enact modernism's basic injunction to "make it new," but they also illuminate its complex relationship to tradition as such. This dynamic is. The course will explore this dynamic in the work of major German-Jewish modernists such as Franz Kafka, Else Lasker-Schüler and Paul Celan.

Course/Module aims:

Knowledge and understanding of the dynamic between tradition and modernity, particularly the Bible and German literature of the 20th century.

Learning outcomes - On successful completion of this module, students should be able to:

Reflect upon and interpret important German-Jewish literary texts in light of the Biblical tradition.
