Course/Module description:

Though he died young, Alexander the Great, one of the greatest commanders of the ancient world, left a significant mark on Western history and culture. After his military campaigns Greek culture was spread throughout the Eastern Mediterranean and the Near East by his successors. Hellenic civilization was profoundly changed by interactions with other cultures, changes marked by a sense of increased diversity and the importance of individualism. This course will explore the final phase of Greek art, that of the Hellenistic period (ca. 323–31 BCE) and will examine the development of Hellenistic style, the major artists of the period, the variety of monuments and sculptural types that it produced as well as the interplay between Hellenistic culture and the art itself. We will focus on architecture, sculpture, painting, and mosaics, but also examine other media that embody the style of the Hellenistic Age.

Course/Module aims:

The course aims at providing the students with a wide comprehensive knowledge of Hellenistic art and architecture, as well as a more basic notion of the Hellenistic culture and history.

Learning outcomes - On successful completion of this module, students should be able to:

1. Identify and properly use the technical terms for used to describe art and architecture of the ancient Hellenistic world.
2. Identify and describe the main features and importance of significant sites, monuments and artistic creations of the ancient Hellenistic world.
3. Describe and analyze the main changes in architecture and art of the ancient Hellenistic world from the days of Alexander and until the beginning of the Roman period.
