Course/Module description:
The course examines the mural and panel painting of the Greek and Roman world, from Aegean Bronze Age to Late Antiquity. It offers a critical overview of scholarly research, inspects the painting diverse architectural contexts and studies processes of continuity and emulation. The variety of subjects depicted in these works of art is immense, and includes religious and ritualistic scenes, mythological themes, landscapes, still life and scenes of everyday life. Alongside formalistic analysis of iconography, technique, representation of space and style we will study the social and cultural context of these works, and thus examine their roles in society, ideals and moral values that they represent and the manner in which they were received by society.

Course/Module aims:
Acquaintance with a selection of works of art and comprehension of various methods for analyzing them.
