Course/Module description:

In this course we assess the historical obstacles that faced women who demanded equality, and the ways in which gender played a role in the struggles of ethnic and racial minorities and disenfranchised groups. We further look at gender norms utilized in these social struggles by analyzing case studies from different historical and geographical contexts. The course will include lectures, class discussions and short movies that relate gender norms to social movements and connect ideology and and practice. Our goal is to unpack the ideologies and social behaviors that allowed for gender equality, and the ways in which these struggles affected attaining social justice.

Course/Module aims:

The goal of the course is to discuss the constructions, practices and gender aspects of social movements around the world, focusing on the United States and the Middle East.

Learning outcomes - On successful completion of this module, students should be able to:

- identify and explain what are gender constructions*
- analyze how gender constructions influenced social movements around the world*
- construct an argument and prove it using articles and scholars that will be studied throughout the course*
- read complex texts that discuss gender norms and social movements, analyze them and discuss them in class*
