Course/Module description:

In this seminar, we study critical theories of culture, focusing on traditional approaches to the cultural genetics of power through notions of domination/resistance and authenticity/commodification, and more recent approaches claiming a more complex texture of innovation, creativity, and restructured power relations. We question the role of theory and criticism in contemporary understandings of culture, examine tensions between the theory and practice of culture, and consider how cultural theory impacts methodologies of cultural research.

Course/Module aims:

Enable students to apply critical thought to cultural analysis

Learning outcomes - On successful completion of this module, students should be able to:

- Combine various paradigms of critical thought
- Critically analyze specific cultural practices, objects, or institutions
- Discuss possibilities and limitations of cultural theory
- Adapt theoretical concepts to specific situations or locations of culture
- Question the relations of cultural theory and praxis/practice

Attendance requirements(%):

100 %

Teaching arrangement and method of instruction: Lectures, debate, close reading, written responses, class presentations, final paper
