Course/Module description:

The two days joint seminar (+ two days field trip for German participants) on comparative local government, urban politics and urban democracy, will include a focus on how the local state engages in major global challenges of housing and immigration, and on central-local state relations as revealed in the context of these challenges. The seminar will take place in early March 2017. Israeli students will have two preparatory classes in December 2016. In addition to those specifically enrolled to the course, students of the course on Urban Politics and Local Democracy will also participate in the seminar as part of their course requirements.

Course requirements for Israeli participants: Attendance in the two preparatory classes, attendance and presentation at the two day workshop.
