Course/Module description:

Especially since 9/11, cleavages and conflicts in ,postsecular Europe' (Jürgen Habermas) are increasingly interpreted in terms of religious values and religious affiliation. Yet, gender is a central terrain on which those conflicts and alterity constructions operate. (i.e. public debates about the headscarf, forced marriage or Turkey's accession to the EU). The course focuses on selected national and transnational examples of religiously connoted and gendered alterity constructions. It does so against the backdrop of theoretical views on European secularisation processes, gender relations and country-specific modes of governing religious pluralism.

Course/Module aims:

The aim of the course is to gain basic insights into secularism and governance of religious diversity in contemporary Europe

Learning outcomes - On successful completion of this module, students should be able to:

... able to view contemporary religiously connoted conflicts in Europe against the backdrop of the knowledge gained in the course: knowledge about important debates and theories on secularization, about country-specific modes of governance of religious diversity and also characteristic (gender-specific) modes of religious othering. Moreover, students should be able to work with texts, situate them in the knowledge gained, discuss them in small groups and present them to the class.

Attendance requirements(%):

80 %

Teaching arrangement and method of instruction: The teaching is organized as an overview of selected academic debates and approaches to secularization and governance of religious diversity. An introductory session will provide the students with background knowledge. Each session will deal with selected relevant thematic aspects. Some of the thematic aspects will be dealt with in (small group) presentations of students.
