Course/Module description:

New Challenges of Liberalism in the Old Continent
Across Western-Europe, long established political arrangements are under attack. Far right parties gain ground leading to increased polarization and fragmentation of society. But how do liberal democracies try to uphold and fight for their core practices, norms and values? The study trip will explore the various responses to the crisis by visiting and engaging in dialogue with institutions, representatives of the intellectual and cultural circles as well as the media in several bordering countries.

Course/Module aims:

The field excursion provides the participants with a wide range of encounters and experiences on-site giving them the opportunity to meet with officials, decision-makers, journalists and other experts. During the trip the student can apply the knowledge gained about Europe and Germany in the first and second semester and deepen their understanding of the political and social landscape(s) through a first hand approach

Learning outcomes - On successful completion of this module, students should be able to:

- explore the political landscape of Western Europe by focusing on topics of common concern*
- communicate knowledge about these topics*
- individually work on particular research topics and present this research to the group*
- discuss divergent views in different national contexts related to history, culture and politics*
