Course/Module description:

The course "organizational studies" is the departmental seminar of the Organizational Behavior area. We will discuss a variety of organizational phenomena, as revealed in state-of-the-art research projects that will be presented. The course includes a 2-sessions series: In the first session, a guest lecturer presents his/her work and in the second session the class discusses this talk. The guest lecturers include both researchers and practitioners, among them faculty members and researchers from other departments and universities.

Course/Module aims:

The course is a part of the academic and professional development of students in the Organizational Behavior area. It aims to deepen and expand the tools for thought and analysis that are acquired in the program and to generate meaningful discussion in the main issues that interest researchers and practitioners in the organizational field.

Learning outcomes - On successful completion of this module, students should be able to:

Discuss and analyze organizational phenomena, taking multiple perspectives.
Assess and evaluate ideas and findings.
Discuss the complex interplay between research and practice.
Self-reflect on professional growth,
