Course/Module description:

Cultural criminology proposes to understand realities of crime, social perversion, victims and the law enforcement system in the context of cultural forces operating consciously and unconsciously to shape hegemonic definitions of crime and justice. Popular culture takes an extensive part in shaping the reality of crime and constructing it in the eyes of society, in accordance with social perceptions. This course will critically examine the construction of crime, victims and the law enforcement system through texts in popular culture, especially TV series (as well as movies, commercials, etc.), in order to understand the role of culture in general and popular culture in particular in shaping the reality of crime. The course will discuss contemporary Western cultural texts dealing with crime and will focus on the analysis of local texts in Israeli culture, in order to produce a seminar research paper around a cultural text to be chosen by the student.

Course/Module aims:

Learning outcomes - On successful completion of this module, students should be able to:

1. To be familiar with the field of cultural criminology and the research possibilities inherent in it.
2. To Understand how to analyze a cultural text with interpretive tools and in light of theoretical perspectives in criminology
3. To critically read popular culture texts dealing with crime, victims and the law enforcement system and to examine how they represent reality, construct reality (preserve stereotypes and power relations) or undermine existing reality and produce resistance.
4. To write a seminar paper that analyzes a cultural text on crime, in light of theories in criminology and using cultural research methodologies.
