Course/Module description:

This course introduces the field of Transitional Justice (TJ). TJ is an interdisciplinary field of practice and study focused on socio-legal processes that accompany situations of regime change following large-scale human rights abuses. It is defined by the United Nations as “the full range of processes and mechanisms associated with a society’s attempt to come to terms with a legacy of large-scale past abuses, in order to ensure accountability, serve justice and achieve reconciliation.” TJ’s processes and mechanisms include criminal prosecutions, truth commissions, reparations, constitutional and institutional reform, as well as vetting procedures, amnesties, apologies, practices of commemoration and more. TJ’s processes and mechanism are aimed at assisting states and societies devastated by conflict or emerging from repressive rule to (re-)establish the rule of law and come to terms with their past in a context marked by broken institutions, insecurity, and a divided population. The course will introduce basic terms, central theoretical accounts, key historical cases and contemporary critiques that characterize the development of the field and its debates.

Course/Module aims:

- Obtaining knowledge of key definitions, concepts and theories of the field of TJ
- Familiarity with key historical cases of TJ mechanisms and processes
- Understanding the historical role of TJ mechanisms and processes
- Ability to critically evaluate the strengths and limitations of the existing concepts, practices and knowledge, and their applicability to different situations.

Learning outcomes - On successful completion of this module, students should be able to:

- To know key definitions, concepts and theories in the field of TJ
- Become familiar with key cases of TJ processes in diverse places around the world
- To understand how TJ’s practices relate to human rights and other international norms
- To understand how TJ’s practices evolved and changed the expectations and experience of political transitions
- To understand and critically assess TJ policies and processes and their applicability in different situations.

Assessment and Grades:

The learning process in the course combines between preparatory work (reading, listening and/or viewing (i.e., films, video's)), active participation and independent research and the grade is designed to reflect these various components.

Individual learning – 50%

1. Active participation in classes – 10%.

Active participation requires and goes beyond presence in the classes. It requires active listening and speaking, an effort to engage with the lecturer's questions and respectful participation in the various discussions during the course's classes.

2. 2 short writing assignments to be submitted during the course – 40%

1st paper to be submitted between the 2nd-4th class; 2nd paper between 5th-8th class (500-700 words each).

Final project (recommended done in pairs) – 50%

3. Oral presentation in class – 20% (15 min. presentation)

4. Final paper – 30% (2,000-2,500 words)

The presentation and final paper will cover a research topic, selected from the topics of the course, approved by the course instructor.
